

Three Ways to Maximize Your Potential Through the American Student Government Association

Whether you're at a large state university, commuter community college, or small private university, ASGA can help your Student Government become more effective and efficient.

1. Become an ASGA Member

ASGA provides research, guidelines, training resources, and support that can help you maximize your time, money, and energy while in office. As a member, you can access thousands of documents and ideas from fellow SGs nationwide, ask us to help you with research on a specific problem, seek advice from our panel of SG experts, and network with other SGs who are dealing with the same issues you are.

The cost to join is low, and includes 24/7 access to the ASGA Web site for all your members, free phone and e-mail consultations, as well as discounts on conferences, speakers, and other SG resources.

2. Attend a Conference

ASGA presents 10 SG training conferences across the country, giving you flexibility to pick a date and location that fits into your hectic schedule. Held in prime locations like Washington DC, Southern California, and New York City, you'll learn a lot but will also have free time to sightsee and bond with your team.

Conference attendees take away specific ideas and best practices which quickly and dramatically improve their Student Governments. We'll help you develop plans to tackle both pressing issues and long-term projects. You'll also head home knowing how to build a more cohesive team: one that's prepared to handle new challenges head-on and more efficiently.

3. Bring Our Experts to Your Campus

If you need more personal training or one-on-one assistance, you can bring in our top SG consultants to help. Our team does extensive pre-visit research so that we can tailor our advice specifically to your situation. In addition, we provide a detailed post-visit report with recommendations and suggestions.

We can also help you train all of your members and officers at your upcoming spring, summer, or fall retreat.
