Residential campus—While there is no set percentage that makes up a “residential campus,” a critical mass (usually at least 20 percent) of students live in on-campus, college-owned or controlled housing including residence halls, apartments, family and graduate housing, and Greek housing. They may also live very nearby campus in institution-owned or operated housing.

Commuter campus—Most or all students do not live in on-campus housing, but instead live in “off-campus” housing of all types including high-density apartments, condominiums, duplexes, houses, and trailers. Commuter students commonly arrive on campus in personal vehicles parking in commuter lots or by bike, mass transit, or foot. A true commuter campus does not have any on-campus housing.

Suitcase campus— Most or all students living on-campus or off-campus go “home” on the weekends to work or to be with their families and friends. Additionally, the institution may not offer many on-campus activities or services.
